Synopsis: With passing of the Patriotic Act, the US Government now has the legal right to investigate and infiltrate groups who they deem a threat to the US National Security. A Guantanamo Bay prisoner is forced to work as an undercover federal agent and pose as a new college student to act as a mole in an ultra radical student organization. In the midsts of uncovering the secret entire national structure of the organization, he also finds a new consciousness. As a nation-wide protest against the US presidential election nears, he finds himself caught between being a mole for the government or rising up with his people.
